

THE WOODWARD BUILDING
1927 FIRST AVENUE NORTH, SUITE 101
BIRMINGHAM, AL 35203

Jackson M. Payne
DIRECT DIAL: 205-986-5037
DIRECT FAX: 205-986-5057
EMAIL: jpayne@lsppc.com

TO: OUR CLIENTS AND FRIENDS
FROM: JACKSON M. PAYNE
DATE: OCTOBER 15, 2023
RE: FINANCIAL STRATEGIES FOR YOUR LIVES AND BUSINESSES

INHERITED IRAs HAVE NEW RULES

The Internal Revenue Service, under recently issued guidance, is allowing people who inherited an individual retirement account after 2019 to skip a required minimum distribution this year.

There has been confusion surrounding the rules for inherited IRAs ever since the Secure Act of 2019 eliminated the so-called “stretch IRA” for most non-spouse beneficiaries.

The old rules had allowed beneficiaries of inherited IRAs to stretch their required minimum distributions over their own lifetimes, permitting decades of tax-free or tax-deferred growth in some cases.

Under the Secure Act of 2019, most non-spouse beneficiaries must now empty their inherited IRA by the end of the 10th year following the original owner’s death. When the law was first passed, many interpreted it to mean that all the money could be withdrawn in year 10 if so desired.

Yet in early 2022, the IRS proposed stricter rules that would apply to someone who inherited an IRA from a person who had already begun taking RMDs; in that case, the recipient must continue taking distributions on an annual schedule.

In other words, if the RMD tap had already been turned on, it couldn't be turned off following the original owner's death, and beneficiaries had to keep withdrawing every year and paying income tax on the amount withdrawn.

Due to the lateness of that proposal and the general confusion about the rules, the IRS recently waived that annual requirement for now, though in many cases, the 10-year rules still applies for IRAs inherited after 2019. Here's what the most recent IRS guidance means for you:

What if I inherited an IRA before 2020?

You are grandfathered into the co-called stretch IRA rules that applied before the law's passage. The relief announced by the IRS also doesn't apply to you, so if you have an RMD scheduled for this year, you must take it.

What if I inherited an IRA from my spouse?

None of the changes apply to spouses, who enjoy far more flexibility when inheriting IRAs. You can roll over your spouse's IRA into your own retirement account or keep it as an inherited account. Either way, you can stretch distributions based on your life expectancy, not the 10 years.

Are there any other beneficiaries who can take RMDs based on their own life expectancy?

Yes. There are a few others. They include: beneficiaries who are no more than 10 years younger than the original IRA owner; those who are chronically ill or disabled; and minor children—not grandchildren—of the original owner.

What if I inherited an IRA after 2019 from someone who had begun taking RMDs?

You don't have to take an RMD this year, but keep an eye out for final regulations on the matter. The account will still have to be drained within 10 years, so more will have to come out in a shorter window.

What if I inherited an IRA from someone who had not begun taking RMDs?

The relief granted recently doesn't apply to you, because you weren't subject to the tougher RMD rules in the first place. However, you still must empty your inherited IRA by the end of the tenth year following the original owner's death.

PLEASE VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT LSPPC.COM
The Alabama State Bar requires the following disclosure:
No representation is made that the quality of legal services to be performed is greater than the quality of legal services performed by other lawyers.

IRS Circular 230 Disclosure: To the extent this message contains tax advice, the U.S. Treasury Department requires me to inform you that any such advice, whether in the body of the message or in any attachment, is not intended or written by my firm to be used, and cannot be used by any taxpayer, for the purpose of avoiding any penalties that may be imposed under the Internal Revenue Code. Advice from my firm relating to tax matters may not be used in promoting, marketing or recommending any entity, investment plan or arrangement to any taxpayer.